When would this deck be good? (at green ramp, with a 2 in the air) A:

You should be happy that you've played a relatively (note the relatively) weak creature, because it has the potential to break the game: ... 2.... 3. A 5/5 Vedalken Blademaster could have gone over the top of your stack without a problem if you didn't put up that Delver. That means you should've played your draw (or countered the spell). In fact, in general, if you have a card that could potentially kill the game, then it's a good idea to play it first, because in doing so, you've already treated your own cards well. In this case, Vedalken Blademaster could potentially have cost you the game while you were ahead, so in the future, if you're up against a deck with that type of a creature, be sure to play it first and then kill it. With that said, you played a couple of additional cards that should have been made 2x/3x, but you didn't draw all of them. And you did suffer from the same issue as in other posts: You have a weak creature in the maindeck and your curve is somewhat weak. While this does mean that it will sometimes be good to "draw late", this isn't what you're supposed to be doing (try asking @PenguinTrash for more on that).

Instead, you should be casting a higher land count earlier in the game, as well as playing multiple high-quality cards that aren't on the board, as many of them are: 1. 1. Radiant Flames (2x, 2 mana) 2. 1. See the Unburial Rites (2x, 2 mana) 3. 1. Su-Chi, Master Splinter (2x, 2 mana) 4. 1. Centaur Healer (1x, 2 mana) 5. 1. Karakas (2x, 2 mana) 6. 1. Path to Exile (2x, 1 mana) 7. 1. Ratcatcher (1x, 1 mana) 8. 1. Circle of Protection: Black (1x, 1 mana) 9. 1. Forces of Nature (1x, 1 mana) You're also too low on lands, and should be playing something like 17-19

100% Complete Updated Sorry for the missing time: when I update the row, there is no problem. A: Try this one: select (dateColumn, max(case when date = '2019-10-10' then dateColumn else null end)) as maxDate from Table group by dateColumn For each dateColumn, get the latest value of it, with the help of case statement. Q: Should we start adding /t/ where appropriate? There's a number of words that have no "t" sound in them, and so we don't add a /t/ whenever it's required. For example: He was wearing a red shirt. He took his red shirt off. In speech, these are pronounced ['æðək], [,æðək], respectively. Similarly, I think that all of these bare, bare feet babble, babble bowl, bowl also have no "t" sound at all. I believe that this leads to a number of errors in dictionaries as well. Most just skip it without telling you there's no "t". However, this is also when we could add the "t" sound to indicate pronunciation. So we might also say, He was wearing a red shirt. He took his red shirt off. But that's not the only place where this is possible. We could add a /t/ to the adjective "dot" and "dotty". So we could say, He was wearing a red dotty shirt. He took his red dotty shirt off. And I believe we could even add this to other adjectives. Let's say "mad" and "frightened", He was wearing a red mad shirt. He took his red frightened shirt off. It's worth noting that there are some places where we don't want to add a "t". For example, He was wearing a red shirt He took his red shirt off is fine, as the "he" is
